a half century ago the international community made a solemn promise to never again allow genocide to go unchallenged in the early days of the post cold war new world order though international leaders failed to stop horrific genocides in bosnia and rwanda chiefly because western leaders lack the political will to use decisive force to suppress ongoing genocide despite increased attention to war crimes issues in the clinton administration and increased rhetoric about its commitment to halting genocide american military force policy still gives lowest priority to responding to gross abuses of human rights in genocide and the global village kenneth campbell explains why the international community fails so miserably to prevent suppress and punish contemporary genocide the book integrates the scattered pieces of this complex problem political military legal and ethical into a more complete clearer picture of the challenge facing the world today campbell engages in a complex multi level analysis of genocide s impact upon world order and the inter play of politics and morality in the international community s determination of the appropriate role for military force in halting genocide and securing an emerging global civil society campbell recommends practical steps the international community can take to greatly improve its response the next time genocide occurs a next time that will occur this timely book investigates emerging efforts to govern artificial intelligence ai at an international level it aptly emphasizes the complex interactions involved when creating international laws exploring potential and current developments in ai regulation the central question of this pioneer work on the responsibility of non state actors nsas and the consequences thereof is to whom are such actors in particular armed opposition groups and business corporations accountable for their actions in armed conflict and in peace times does responsibility in international law apply to these nsas qua groups while much has been written about nsas rights and participation in the global theatre as well as the responsibility of the state and international organisations for wrongful acts by nsas scant attention has been paid to questions of nsa organizational responsibility in spite of their potential to wreak international havoc this volume offers innovative insights into this unexplored territory by analyzing responsibility questions from both theoretical and empirical perspectives there is persuasive evidence suggesting we are on the brink of human induced ecological disaster that could change life on earth as we know it there is also a general consensus among scientists about the pace and extent of global ecological decay including a realisation that humans are central to causing the global socio ecological crisis this new epoch has been called the anthropocene considering the many benefits that constitutional environmental protection holds out in domestic legal orders it is likely that a constitutionalised form of global environmental law and governance would be better able to counter the myriad exigencies of the anthropocene this book seeks to answer this central question from the perspective of the anthropocene what is environmental constitutionalism and how could it be extrapolated to formulate a global framework in answering this question this book offers the first systematic conceptual framework for global environmental constitutionalism in the epoch of the anthropocene in the late 1930s a number of american women especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups protested against the nation s entry into world war ii while their story is fairly well known margaret paton walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that american intervention was absolutely necessary paton walsh recounts how the united states became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of american women who faced it as a necessary evil covering the period between 1935 and 1941 she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women s organizations informal women s networks and even male dominated lobbying groups in the great debate over whether america should enter the war some women favored aid to the allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct u s involvement but also because they believed war was preferable to a nazi victory paton walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day elizabeth cutter morrow whose son in law charles lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman supported the revision of the neutrality acts to allow the sale of arms to the allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast soon other women joined this debate esther brunauer of the aaup journalist dorothy thompson and organizations like the league of women voters and national women s trade union league broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate american aid for the allied cause focusing on the conflict in europe paton walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the lend lease program for america s entry into the war but supported it nevertheless by late 1941 the women s division of the fight for freedom committee had been established no longer merely advocating aid to britain to keep american boys out of battle this organization supported direct american involvement in the war as a means of stopping nazi oppression while most historians have focused on women s pacifism paton walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs our war too is a story of american women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace it expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on american public opinion over the build up to the war
